

Registration for Washtenaw County
Fall 2010

Thank you for your interest in the Michigan Conservation Stewards Program. This program is designed for anyone interested in conservation, outdoor recreation, nature learning, natural areas, current conservation issues, local parks, and other topics such as rivers, streams, birds and wildlife. Through participation in this program, you will learn essential strategies to help restore and conserve ecosystems in Washtenaw County. The series of classes, led by experts in various fields of conservation and natural resources, will include lectures, interactive learning and field experiences.

A required component of this program includes the completion of community service projects related to restoring and conserving ecosystems. Michigan Conservation Stewards' service projects may include habitat restoration, data collection for frog and toad surveys, educational presentations, projects you design yourself, invasive species management with a local land conservancy or educational programs with a conservation district to help manage our local natural resources.

To become a certified Michigan Conservation Steward, participants must fulfill the following requirements:

- Attend all classes, including field experiences (40 total hours)
- Complete a minimum of 40 hours of volunteer conservation service within one year.
